

Children in Classes

In the event of unforeseen circumstances (such as snow days, childcare cancellations), if the child/children of a School of Education student is/are well, they are welcome to come to class with their parent provided that the parent brings a quiet activity for the child/children to engage in during class and if the child/children become disruptive, thus impacting the learning of other students, the parent will take the child/children outside the classroom until the matter is resolved. It is expected that, in such circumstances, all students in the class will help provide a welcoming and respectful environment for the child/children of School of Education students. In the event that the circumstances persist or that a School of Education student is unable to attend class or complete an assignment on time because a child is ill, the instructor will be notified as soon as possible so that adjustments may be made.
